Summary

This circular memorandum aims to inform heads of primary and secondary schools about the details of the National Security Education Exhibition Boards and “Little National Affairs Experts” Interactive Quiz Game Resource Pack (Resource Pack) in support of the implementation of national security education. Schools are encouraged to borrow the exhibition boards for display in school and promote the above-mentioned game to students.

Details

2. The Standing Committee of the National People’s Congress passed the National Security Law of the People’s Republic of China on 1 July 2015 and designated 15 April each year as the National Security Education Day to raise public awareness of national security and create a positive atmosphere of safeguarding national security. The 15th of April this year marks the seventh National Security Education Day, and the year of 2022 also marks the 25th anniversary of Hong Kong’s return to the motherland. The Education Bureau (EDB) issued a circular memorandum earlier on to invite schools to take part in the “2022 Let’s Join Hands in Safeguarding National Security” Programme jointly organised by the EDB and the Security Bureau to encourage the participation of teachers and students and enable national security education to take root in schools. For details, please refer to the EDB Circular Memorandum No. 35/2022.

3. It is the responsibility of schools to implement national security education through the school curriculum. National security education is a part of, and inseparable from, national education. To support the smooth implementation of national security education in schools, the EDB renews/enriches the related learning and teaching resources through various support measures to enrich students’ understanding of our country, nurture in students a sense of belonging to our country, a sense of national identity, and their awareness and responsibility of safeguarding national security.

4. The EDB has newly developed the National Security Education Exhibition Boards (Chinese version) for schools to enhance students’ knowledge and understanding of national security. The first set of exhibition boards, with the theme of “What is national security?”, introduces to students the definition, different domains and importance of national security through lively and interesting illustrations. This set of exhibition boards, which comprises four boards, is available in primary school and secondary school versions for loan to schools for display on their school campuses for one week. For details, please refer to Annex 1.

5. To support schools in the implementation of Constitution, Basic Law and national security education, the EDB has compiled the Resource Pack, which provides interactive quiz games in phases to enable students of different key stages to learn about the Constitution, the Basic Law, national security and the development of our country in a relaxing and interesting atmosphere, thereby deepening their understanding of the country and fostering their sense of national identity. The latest set of “Little National Affairs Experts” interactive quiz games (applicable to upper primary and secondary schools) is now available. The EDB recommends that schools encourage students to participate in the above-mentioned game on the days before and after the National Security Education Day to cultivate their self-directed learning attitudes and capabilities. Schools can also make arrangements in other appropriate classes/times to facilitate the participation of teachers and students so as to promote Constitution, Basic Law and national security education proactively. The following is the website of the “Little National Affairs Experts” Interactive Quiz Game (Chinese version only): www.edb.gov.hk/ne.

6. For the purpose of encouraging schools to make good use of the Resource Pack and cultivate students’ self-directed learning attitudes, the EDB has launched the “Little National Affairs Experts” Learning Award Scheme to show appreciation to outstanding students. Please refer to Annex 2 for details.
